so genrb doesn't issue warnings */ __{""} } Q: Function overloading in C++ 11? I'd like to write a function that would be able to work over different types at compile time. For example, assume that we have a template function: template void foo(T t) { /*... */ } And we have another function: int foo(int i) { /*... */ } Now, I'd like to be able to write something like this: template void foo(T t, V v) { /*... */ } Is it possible to write a generic overloading function in C++11 in such a way? A: You can, but I advise you to be careful and use optional template std::enable_if_t::value> foo(T t, V v) { /*... */ } Expression 04aeff104c
