United States, 520 U.S. 461, 466-67 (1997) (alterations in original) (internal quotation marks omitted). The record, however, does not reflect the district court's compliance with our prior instructions to explain the significance of an advisory Guidelines range, in light of the Sentencing Commission's advisory policy statements, and the scope of the district court's discretion in imposing a sentence. After the district court sentenced McDonald to a Guidelines range of 360 months to life imprisonment, we remanded the case for further proceedings and instructed the court to explain why it believed that "McDonald's advisory Guidelines range[,] even without the sentencing factor of childhood abuse, [was] insufficient to deter and to protect the public from [his] future criminal conduct."
