The Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy - "Douglas Adams" Douglas Adams. A writer of unparalleled wit and humor. A writer with a signature style, which critics have often referred to as - "The Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy." The first in a trilogy of novels that he wrote over the course of his career, it introduced his readers to a galaxy that they would also come to appreciate in the coming years of his life as he went on to become a writer and critic. He needs to find a guide to take him across the country, and he goes looking for the ideal candidate. He finds them in the form of Ford Prefect. Ford Prefect is an unusual kind of brain. He possesses an IQ far in excess of what is really human, but he is incapable of producing for himself a "space suit," and his clothes are one size too big. When he talks, his voice is so high-pitched and squeaky that nobody can understand him. Ford is endlessly inventive, and he engages in endless discussions with the traveller. The dialogue is witty, magical, and profoundly informative. The manner in which Adams tells his tale of the universe is brilliant, as are many of the twists and turns that the plot takes. Each of the three books in the Hitchhiker's series, and the television
