

Old Hohner Piano Accordion Serial Number. Hohner HPA-130-B Piano Accordion (4'). The Hohner HPA-130-B Piano Accordion is a unique rectangular piano accordion. I'm trying to print this line of code, but it's not printing. Instead it is printing the word "line".
`#include { printf("String!"); } If I just output the string it works, so the problem has to do with printf(). What am I doing wrong? #include int main() { printf("Line!"); } Compile with: gcc a.c -o asm2d ./asm2d String!` A sequence of commands is executed to link, assemble, and search for the object file or files whose file name is asm2d.o. The linker first extracts the respective input, but discarded, object files from those inputs. The linker then in sequence adds the output of the previous, to each input, in order, and links them into a single new object file. The linker does not combine more than one input object file. If the linker encounters an input object file named asm2d.o, it verifies that the file does not depend on any object files of which the file is a part. If the linker does not find any inputs named asm2d.o, then it creates the named file from the input files named asm2.o, asm2b.o, asm2c.o, asm2d.o, asm3.o, or asm3b.o. Now you may ask about the initial commandline arguments, such as "-o a.out" or "--output a.out". You may look at them by using the manual page for your operating system; for example, on *NIX systems, type `man -k a.out` To print the manual page on-screen, use `man -k | less` or `man -k | more` For other platforms, type
