Batman Begins: Original Soundtrack. Batman Begins. Prince. Best Of Prince. For You.Q: ruby - guard against duplicate method calls when using multiple threads I have a method that that computes a total for a set of items. Currently, the workers are called at the end, and the results are saved to the database. Now, I would like to be able to have the workers happen in the background while the results are being saved, so that the method doesn't get a bunch of duplicate results when I run it. How can I determine if that's the case? Ideally, I'd like to be able to stop the workers when they throw an exception. `todoItem = TodoItem.new todoItem.title = params[:title] todoItem.date = params[:date] todoItem.text = params[:text] todoItem.frequency = params[:frequency] todoItems.create!(todoItem) todoItem.save` worker = Thread.new do sleep 5 todoItems.each do |todoItem| # perform some work here end end worker.join A: You can just wrap everything into a begin-rescue-end block. The goal is to call rescue only when you receive an exception, not the work part of the block itself. `begin todoItems.each do |todoItem| # perform some work here end rescue Interrupt => e # do cleanup here end` Chronic dietary supplementation with satraplatin, a platinum analogue, or dacarbazine in combination with vincristine and prednisolone in dogs with malignant lymphoma: preliminary results. This investigation evaluated the tolerability, efficacy, and pharmacokinetics of satraplatin (JM8A3) in combination with vincristine and prednisolone in dogs with malignant lymphoma. A therapeutic protocol was developed using a combination of JM8A3 (1.0 mg/kg), vincristine (0.4 mg/kg), and prednisolone (100 mg/m<sup>2</sup>). The regimen was repeated every 21 days, based on a modified four-drug toxicity protocol.
